Richardson Building
Salisbury
Private

c. 1921

The Richardson building stands out along East Main Street with its three-story façade of polished white blocks, which contrast with the red brick elevations of the commercial structures to each side. Dating around 1921, the enamel front is distinguished by a rope molded decorative border that enhances the outside edge. Stretching across the top of the three story structure, as well as each window opening, is a molded enamel cornice. A shallow pediment finishes the top of the parapet wall. The remaining sides were erected in common bond brick.

Lloyd A. Richardson financed construction of this commercial block around 1921 after acquiring the lot from William J. Downing. By testimony of the 1923 Sanborn Insurance map the building housed initially an automobile showroom on the first floor and a dance hall above. During the second quarter of the twentieth century, the newly developed lots at the east end of Main Street were devoted largely to automobile showrooms, tire sales, garages, as well as service stations.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Richardson building is located at 130 East Main Street in the center of Salisbury, Wicomico County, Maryland. The three-story rectangular commercial block faces north and is sandwiched between two other commercial properties. Built around 1921, the three-story, three commercial block is distinguished by a white enameled brick façade that is keyed into common bond brick side walls. The three-story front and side walls are finished with parapets that disguise a flat or low pitched shed roof.

The north (main) façade is three stories tall with large glass opening on each floor. The front has been recently reworked with the installation of new glass panels, and the first floor projects outward to include a separate entrance. A secondary doorway in the northwest corner is an original opening, which is enhanced with an enameled cornice enriched with a dentiled bed molding. Trimming the outer corners of the enameled façade is enameled rope molding that rises to the top of the third floor. The second and third floors are defined by large glass window openings framed by the white enameled cornices. Stretching across the wall surface above the third floor window is an enameled cornice enriched with large dentils. A shallow pediment caps the front parapet wall.

The south and west walls are pierced by window openings, most of which have double rowlock segmental arches. A tall furnace flue rises on the southwest corner of the building.

The interiors have been reworked to provide professional office space.
